Historical Legacy

The Government Public Library Prayagraj, formerly known as the Allahabad Public Library, is situated in the historic and holy city of Prayagraj, Uttar Pradesh. Established in 1864 with the approval of the Governor, the library has served as an important centre of knowledge, learning, and intellectual heritage for more than a century and a half.

The library is located in Chandrashekhar Azad Park, formerly known as Alfred Park. The magnificent building, known as the Thornhill Mayne Memorial, was designed by the renowned British architect Richard Roskell Bayne. Constructed in the Scottish Baronial Revival architectural style, the building is noted for its distinctive Gothic features, imposing pillars, ornamental details, and elegant architectural character.

The library building has considerable historical significance. During the British Raj, when Allahabad served as the capital of the United Provinces, the building was associated with the legislative administration of the province. In 1879, the Public Library was shifted to its present premises in Alfred Park, now known as Chandrashekhar Azad Park.

Over the years, the Government Public Library Prayagraj has developed into one of the most important repositories of knowledge in Uttar Pradesh. Its rich collection includes approximately 125,000 books, around 40 types of magazines, and 28 different newspapers in Hindi, English, Urdu, and Bangla. The library also preserves valuable old newspapers, periodicals, gazettes, and manuscript collections, reflecting the literary, cultural, historical, and intellectual heritage of India.

Established in 1864, the Government Public Library Prayagraj holds the distinction of being one of the oldest and largest public libraries in Uttar Pradesh. Its historic building, extensive collections, and long association with the intellectual life of Prayagraj make it an important cultural and heritage institution. The library continues to preserve and provide access to valuable sources of knowledge for researchers, students, scholars, and the general public.

Architectural Heritage

The first sitting of 'Legislative Council of the North-Western Provinces of Awadh' was held in the main hall on January 08, 1887. This sacred place has been a center of intellectual activities since its inception.
